MRS. CARLISLE.

tutive methods of measuring public opinion, President Arthur entertained the two socialists at the White House. President Arthur was accompanied by Senator John W. James. The two men found Mrs. Chase even match for them, and both have high tribute to her sagacity.

Kate Chase's Intuition.

It was Mrs. Chase who pointed out General Arthur to the two socialists for the Republican nomination to Blaine. General Arthur did not know Blaine. Would either the field or Blaine would enter the field at all? But Mrs. Chase took the matter to her confidence, and she was sure Mrs. Moreover, ready to make the race. Moreover, she visited General Arthur to withdraw, and Blaine was sure to beat him out of the nomination. Blaine will be nominated, and then he will be elected," declared prophet Mrs. Chase. And he was.

It was the great regret of his life to see his son succeed as General Arthur afterwards covered.

with his great love for her was ever to gain her sanction before adopting a public policy. General Garfield also loved her on his wife. She gave him assistance in his private life, and after his election to the presidency, maintained her position as helpmeet.

Mrs. Carlisle's Rare Talent.

As I have already said a great many of the successful public men of our country are the confident of their wives in their political matters. Mrs. Carlisle, it is known, is a woman of strong character, good brain. She has unusually clear perceptions and extraordinary powers of memory. Though her husband is a man of letters, possessing the most remarkable intellect of the world, yet he has always leaned much upon the memory of his wife. As secretary of the party Mr. Carlisle continues the policy we pursued as speaker of the house as far as the acquisition of public work is concerned. Little details of his public work.

been afraid to hear Mrs. Carlisle die the tariff and currency questions with millinery and understanding which none could boast of.

"I am sure of her that if not she could go into the great financial department of the government, take her husband's place and run the machine as he could. This is doubtless an exaggeration, but I have no doubt she could be the secretary's desk and make a credit showing at management. Many bright and adaptable women could do so. I have seen the great department of one of the great departments of the government is not so difficult a task you might imagine it to be. If one is willing to place himself, at least temporarily, in the shoes of his constituents, they will be wiser. In all of the great departments you know just as well how to manage them as the ablest of the gentlemen are appointed to look after them by president. If a secretary of the trea sures to do it in that way, he may sit a
